OLD GOVERNMENT HOUSE

Location: Corner Princes Street & Waterloo Quadrant, Auckland

The historic Old Government House was the first mansion of its kind built in New Zealand. Classical in style, it was the seat of government from its completion in 1856 until 1865 when the capital was moved to Wellington. For the next century it was Auckland's vice regal residence. Royalty stayed there six times and the present Queen broadcast her Christmas speech to the Commonwealth from upstairs in 1953.

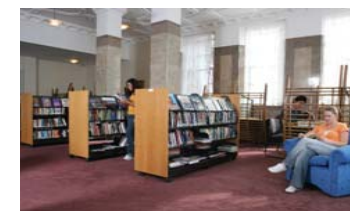

Old Government House is right in the centre of the campus and has five self-contained apartments with one or two bedrooms, a lounge, fully equipped kitchen and bathroom available exclusively to academics visiting the University. These budget apartments are furnished and include crockery, linen and a television. Telephones with free local access and telephone links for dial-up internet access are available. University Broadband internet access can unfortunately not be arranged due to the age of the building.

Laundry facilities are provided on the premises.

Early booking is advisable as the apartments are very popular and often fully booked well in advance.

Booking Conditions

- Reservations can only be made at the request of an academic department, which remains responsible for payment, and cannot be directly booked by visitors.

- Reservations are limited to 12 weeks only and are for a minimum of one week. Charges are per week.
